Message from Department Chair Marianne Montgomery

After the first two weeks of Fall 2020, everyone in English taught online, even brand-new graduate teaching assistants. Though this situation was forced on us by the COVID-19 pandemic, faculty and students rose to the occasion. I won’t pretend it was easy. To the contrary, everyone is stretched thin and exhausted: by working from home, by teaching online, by reading the news, by caring for children and elders, by tending to the sick, and by mourning the dead.

Amidst all this – even as we lament losses – I’ve tried to look for and be inspired by the new ways of doing our work of teaching, scholarship, and service learned during the pandemic. Let me share a few examples.

The first comes from my own experience as a teacher. I’ll be honest: I found online teaching utterly draining. I’ve never devoted as much time to course prep as I did last semester. But in the process, it was exciting to learn new tools that I will continue to use in my classes when we return to the physical campus. Students read Shakespeare aloud in Flipgrid videos, discussed texts using the shared annotation tool Hypothes.is, and collaborated on charts using OneDrive. They didn’t take exams; instead, they built a focused portfolio of assignments. It’s easy for experienced teachers to get into a rut; and the pandemic and online teaching forced us to re-examine our teaching practices, learn new things, and experiment. Lessons learned will surely shape all our teaching going forward.

Another affordance: programs and events, now online, enable energetic scholarly exchange. Rather than traveling to conferences, we now have frequent opportunities to tune in to talks and panels hosted by institutions around the globe.

Continued on last page
MA is Enrollment “Hotspot” • Matt Cox, Director, Graduate Studies

As Graduate Director, I’m looking to balance program stability and student support during a global pandemic with a high level of interest and enrollments. In fact, Graduate School Dean Paul Gemperline’s January 2021 newsletter describes our English MA as an enrollment “hotspot” at ECU.

The number of registered students cumulatively in our English graduate programs (our four certificates, our MA in English, and our PhD in RWPC) totals 142 students. This is up significantly over the previous four years (125 in 2020, 111 in 2019, 104 in 2018, and 119 in 2017). This represents a 35% higher overall enrollment compared to last year, which was itself 28% higher than the year before. We are feeling the volume of work with so many students and interest.

With the help of our PhD Coordinator, Erin Frost, and our Graduate Administrator, Tim Putnam, I’ve been able to meet student needs.

We are strategizing for the automating and streamlining of processes (like the increased use of DocuSign) to work within a predominately online environment. We have also made progress updating and modifying graduate handbooks and web pages. Additionally, I’m working to prioritize the tying up of loose ends on curricular changes/updates.

In such tumultuous and uncertain times, I’m trying not to take on too many new projects but rather to support our growing grad student population and help advocate for resources and be aware of ways that faculty workloads are increasing even while resources and compensation are not.

I always welcome your input and thoughts on how we do these things. I’m grateful, even with its challenges, to be in the position we’re in – one that many other units at ECU would find enviable.

Dr. Cox began a three-year term as the department’s Director of Graduate Studies in fall 2020. He can be reached at coxmat@ecu.edu.

Scholarships Available

The Department of English offers a variety of scholarships to qualified undergraduate and graduate students:

- Charles and Patricia Moore Scholarship in English
- Ebbs Scholarship
- Friends of English Scholarship
- McKinley and Barbara Price Study Abroad Endowed Scholarship
- Russell Christman Memorial Scholarship
- Bill Hallberg Award
- Debbie O’Neal Award
- Paul Farr Memorial Essay Contest

Note that awards are dependent upon funding levels and may not be offered every year. External, national, and international scholarships are also available to students.
New Opportunities Await! • Donna Kain, Director, Undergraduate Studies

What a crazy time to take over as Director of Undergraduate Studies! But I’m loving it so far. The COVID pandemic challenges us, but the experience also opens up some interesting ways of working. We’ve been meeting students individually in virtual “offices” and “classrooms,” learning a lot about what works and doesn’t. College and university open houses and orientations, mostly online, have involved experiments with new platforms.

We have a lot going on in the department, including the fall 2021 launch of our new BS in Professional Writing and Information Design. This is an exciting and timely degree that extends work we’ve been doing in the department for many years. The degree creates opportunities for students to double major with a BA in English AND a BS in Professional Writing and Information Design, a great combo.

I look forward to hearing everyone’s ideas about reaching out to potential students and engaging our majors. We’ll be contacting faculty, students, and alums for advice and feedback. Potential majors want to know what they’ll study and experience in the program and beyond. Working with students and faculty is an honor, and I hope to live up to the fabulous job Lida Cope did for six years. And I must recognize Samantha Hamilton, who keeps me straight and who is a wonderful sounding board – she cannot be thanked enough.

Dr. Kain began a three-year term as the department’s Director of Undergraduate Studies in fall 2020. She can be reached at kaind@ecu.edu.

Sabree Flood Receives Debbie O’Neal Award in Linguistics/TESOL

Mark Johnson, president of Carolina TESOL – Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages – announced that Sabree Flood is the recipient of the 2020 Debbie O’Neal Award.

This memorial scholarship, created and funded by the Carolina TESOL Association, provides $500 for an outstanding undergraduate or graduate student with an interest in linguistics and/or TESOL.

Ms. Flood (left) – who is majoring in Hispanic Studies with a concentration in Education – was unanimously chosen by Linguistics/TESOL faculty in ECU’s Department of English. She is also earning a minor in Linguistics with the TESOL certification.

This eponymous award honors a department colleague who played an active role in the school’s University Language Academy, which helped teach international students conversational English. Debbie O’Neal died in a plane accident in 2013.
Transition

Suzanne Manizza Roszak has accepted a position at the University of Groningen in the Netherlands.

Publications & Creative Activity

Margaret Bauer. “Cinderella’s First Ball Gown.” Lighten Up Online.

Margaret Bauer. “Hope Chest Turned Coffee Table.” storySouth.

Margaret Bauer. “Navigating the Pod People.” Cold Mountain Review.

Margaret Bauer. “This Girl Rules.” Dead Mule School.

Helena Feder. “Portrait of a Gentleman.” After the Art.

Helena Feder. “‘Dover Beach’ and the Uncertain Afterlife of Victorian Environments.” Green Letters: Studies in Ecocriticism.

Helena Feder. “Concrete Breathes: A Conversation with Ledelle Moe.” Another Chicago Magazine.

Christy Hallberg. “Aperture.” Fiction Southeast. (Recipient of the journal’s October Story of the Month designation.)

After 40 Years, John Donne Variorum Has Been Completed

The final volumes of the Variorum Edition of the Poetry of John Donne have been submitted to Indiana University Press. The last two of the three-part Songs & Sonets set – Songs & Sonets, Volume 4.2 and Songs & Sonets, Volume 4.3 – will contain texts and commentary for all 57 of the poet’s love lyrics and are scheduled to be published in 2022.

In addition, the Divine Poems, Volume 7.2, is now available, containing newly edited critical texts of thirteen Donne poems.

Since 1981, the National Endowment for the Humanities has supported the project with twelve separate grants totaling in excess of $2 million. The work has also been supported by ECU’s Department of English; Thomas Harriot College of Arts & Sciences; and Division of Research, Economic Development and Engagement.

The ten-volume collection has been directed by two general editors, Gary Stringer and Jeffrey Johnson, with the assistance of approximately forty textual and commentary editors from eight different countries.

John Hoppenthaler. “We will taste this history together, my friend’: An Homage to Heyen.” Redactions: Poetry, Poetics, and Prose.

Grants

Nikki Caswell received an ECU Office for Equity and Diversity mini grant for her project “Write On through Anti-Racist Pedagogy.” She seeks to help faculty think through ways in which assignments might hold barriers to how students learn.

Guisepppe Getto (with Marti Van Scott & Ariana Billingsley) received a $50,000 Innovation Corps - National Innovation Network Teams Program Grant. The funds will help the team behind the Self-Reported On-the-Water Boat Operators Safety (SOBOS) app develop a business model for funding its continuing work to improve boater safety.

Suzanne Manizza Roszak. “‘Child-Poems,’ Transnational Affinities, and Literary Activism: Langston Hughes and Rabindranath Tagore for Young Readers.” Children’s Literature Association Quarterly.

Suzanne Manizza Roszak. “Requiem.” American Literary Review.

Fellowship

Celestine Davis has been awarded the North Carolina BLOC Fluidic 2020 Communications Fellowship for iNCite Stories: A Storytelling Project.

The workshops were co-sponsored by Migrant Roots Media, Amplified Voice, and North Carolina Asian Americans Together.

The storytelling project involves community members from across North Carolina.
North Carolina poet laureate Jaki Shelton Green (below) was the keynote speaker at “Fire at the Crossroads: Addressing the Intersectionality of Race, Injustice, Disparities, Self-Possession and Embedded Beliefs in Literature and Life.”

This virtual event focused on the explication of racial, cultural, and social themes in the works of contemporary and historic writers such as James Baldwin, Ta-Nehisi Coates, Jaki Shelton Green, Langston Hughes, and Caroline Randall Williams. “Fire at the Crossroads” featured student and faculty presenters from both schools.

Gera Miles helped coordinate the program, which was co-sponsored by ECU’s Department of English and Ethnic Studies Program and Pitt Community College’s English & Humanities Department, PCC Global, and PCC MAC.

Roundtable Panelists Share Efforts to Make Courses More Inclusive

The department hosted “Inclusive Pedagogy and Diverse Syllabi: A Roundtable Discussion,” an informal conversation in which faculty shared their efforts to make courses more inclusive of diverse texts and perspectives.

Presenters were Erin Frost, Anna Froula, Mark Johnson, Donna Kain, and Laureen Tedesco.
DISSH Hosts “Digital Humanities in Extraordinary Times”

ECU’s Digital Innovation and Scholarship in Social Sciences and Humanities (DISSH) hosted the 2020 Virtual Digital Institute of the Digital Humanities Collaborative of North Carolina with the theme “Digital Humanities in Extraordinary Times.”

Donna Kain (English) and Irina Swain (Foreign Languages and Literatures) planned and organized the December event on behalf of DISSH, which drew 240 attendees from across the state and from as far away as Japan and the Virgin Islands. Topics for the 21 presentations included documenting and responding to life during the pandemic, preserving African American history and experiences, and using technology to create digital projects.

Alex Gil, Digital Scholarship Librarian at Columbia University Libraries, delivered the keynote address, “Bearing Witness: The COVID-19 and Inequality History Documentation Project.”

CARE Book Club Initiative Promotes Equity and Anti-Racism

The newly chartered Council on Anti-Racism and Equity (CARE) in Thomas Harriot College of Arts and Sciences hosted its inaugural book club in the fall.

Awards

Cheryl Dudasik-Wiggs was named an ECU Woman of Distinction and received the Dr. Linda Allred Profiles in Leadership Award for her years of service, leadership, and advocacy in the Department of English, the Gender Studies Program, and the community. In addition, she received a Star Award from the NC Democratic Women for her work on equity issues in her hometown.

Andrea Kitta was awarded the Chicago Folklore Prize from the American Folklore Society for the best book of folklore scholarship in 2020: The Kiss of Death: Contagion and Contamination in Folklore. She also received the Brian McConnell Book Award from the International Society for Contemporary Legend Research.

The group – led by Reginald Watson (English) and Kirk Miller (Criminal Justice) – met virtually throughout the semester to discuss Michelle Alexander’s The New Jim Crow.

The mission of CARE is to provide a constructive forum for the regular discussion of topics related to anti-racism and equity that will include faculty, staff, and students.

The council will work with university and community partners to develop, promote, and publicize anti-racism programming and initiatives.
Interview

Marame Gueye was quoted in the New York Times as an expert on Senegalese literature for the series “Around the World at Home.”

Virtual Presentations

Brian Glover & Marianne Montgomery. “Using Hypothes.is for Shared Annotation in Literature Classes.” ECU Office for Faculty Excellence.

Andrea Kitta. “Day of Straws and Folklore.” Sirius Arts Centre, Cork County, Ireland.

Andrea Kitta. “Public Acceptance of Vaccines.” Dialogues in the Humanities and Social Sciences.

Andrea Kitta. 2020 Fife Folklore Honor Lecture and Keynote Lecture. Utah Folklore Society. Logan, UT.

Andrea Kitta. “Slender Man: The Academic Story of Folklore, the Supernatural, and You.” Phenomenacon.

Andrea Kitta. “COVID-19 Folklore.” Texas Folklife. Austin, TX.

Andrea Kitta. “Using Social Media to Promote Folklore.” American Folklore Society Annual Meeting.

Gera Miles. “Extracting Bodies and Souls with Bones and Beatification.” Fire at the Crossroads.

Reginald Watson. Just Mercy. ECU Common Read. [Panelist.]

Outreach

Andrea Kitta organized A Labor of Mourning, a community memorial to acknowledge neighbors, friends, and loved ones who have been lost to COVID-19. The September event was part of a nationwide grassroots movement – led by Naming the Lost – to remember and honor the dead. The three-day display was located in Uptown Greenville’s green space; and visitors left flowers, artwork, and notes or stood in silence to pay their respects.
Tom Herron and his team have been awarded a $93,212 grant in the Digital Humanities Advancement category for “Castle to Classrooms: Developing an Irish Castle in Virtual Reality.”

The grant will fund the design and testing of teaching modules built in virtual reality based on the 3-D digital model of Kilcolman Castle, Ireland, home of English poet Edmund Spenser.

The model is currently found on the website, Centering Spenser: A Digital Resource for Kilcolman Castle, which has recently been updated to become more user-friendly, including enhanced graphics, downloadable website content, and a sample virtual tour of the castle. Shown above is the Great Hall attached to the Tower House in the castle compound.

Laurie Godwin (ITCS), Doug Barnum (ECU Virtual Reality Lab), and English graduate students Sarah Parrish and David Buchanan assisted with the year-long remodel of the website.

Women’s Agenda Assembly Held

Charnessa Ridley, Board Chair of North Carolina Women United, was the keynote speaker at the biennial Pitt County Women’s Agenda Assembly, which was held in October. Students, staff, and faculty from throughout ECU discussed and sought solutions for gender-focused issues affecting their lives.

The Women’s Agenda Assembly was co-hosted by ECU’s Gender Studies Program and by North Carolina Women United, a non-partisan coalition of state and local organizations working to achieve full gender equality.

Donna Kain and Cheryl Dudasik-Wiggs organized the virtual gathering. Mark Rasdorf (LGBTQ Center) and Celestine Davis served as group facilitators.
Whichard Visiting Distinguished Chair in the Humanities

Kirstin Squint – Associate Professor of English at High Point University – serves as ECU’s 2020-2021 Whichard Visiting Distinguished Professor in the Humanities.

The Whichard Chair is housed in the Thomas Harriot College of Arts and Sciences and is made possible through a generous donation from the Whichard family in honor of David Julian and Virginia Suther Whichard of Greenville. Dr. Squint’s professorship is being co-hosted by the Department of English and the Gender Studies Program.

Publications and Awards

Swamp Souths: Literary and Cultural Ecologies – co-edited with Eric Gary Anderson, Taylor Hagood, and Anthony Wilson – was published by Louisiana State University Press. The collection was named a November 2020 Editor’s Pick by Choice Reviews.

In addition, Appalachian Reckoning: a Region Responds to Hillbilly Elegy – to which she contributed the chapter “Kentucky, Coming and Going” – received the Walter and Lillian Lowenfels Criticism Award by the American Book Awards. Appalachian Reckoning was published by West Virginia University Press in 2019.

Presentations and Interviews

• “Suffrage at 100: Celebrating the Anniversary of Women’s Right to Vote.” Interviewed by Erin Ward. ECU News Services Blog.

• “Getting Caught Up on Voting History” and “Getting Out the Vote at ECU.” Interviewed with Alex Dennis (Democratic Engagement / Pirates Vote) and Karen Zipf (History). Talk Like a Pirate Podcast. ECU News Services.

• “Interview with Tommy Orange.” George Mason University’s Fall for the Book Festival.

Film Series

Cheryl Dudasik-Wiggs collaborated with a representative from PBS’ American Experience to create a series of virtual events celebrating the 19th Amendment. Over three evenings, clips of The Vote were shown, followed by discussions led by ECU scholars Crystal Chambers (College of Education), Wendy Sharer (English), and Karin Zipf (History). Facilitators were Helena Feder (English), Mona Russell (History), and Donna Kain (English). The series was sponsored by the Gender Studies Program.
Whichard Visiting Distinguished Chair in the Humanities

Kirstin Squint, Whichard Visiting Distinguished Professor in the Humanities, facilitated events with two major writers during fall 2020.

Dr. Cathleen Cahill (left), an award-winning author and Associate Professor of History at Penn State University, presented a virtual lecture titled “Recasting the Vote: How Women of Color Transformed the Suffrage Movement.” This event was in recognition of the 100th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment.

Dr. Squint also conducted an online interview with Pulitzer-nominated Native American author Tommy Orange (above right) about his latest book, There, There, which has been named one of the Best Books of the Year by The New York Times Book Review, Time, and National Public Radio.

Whichard Chair to Host Choctaw Writer LeAnne Howe March 18

LeAnne Howe, Eidson Distinguished Professor in American Literature at the University of Georgia, will read from her earlier fiction and poetry and from her latest book, Savage Conversations March 18 at 7 pm. This virtual event will be free and open to the public.

Ms. Howe is an enrolled member of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma and a prolific writer of fiction, poetry, drama, literary criticism, and screenplays. She is the winner of the American Book Award (2002), the Prix Médicis Etranger (2004), and the Oklahoma Book Award (2006) and is the recipient of a United States Artists Fellowship (2012) and the inaugural Modern Language Association prize for Studies in Native American Literature, Cultures, and Languages (2015).

Her most recent publication is the groundbreaking anthology, When the Light of the World was Subdued, Our Songs Came Through: A Norton Anthology of Native Nations Poetry, a collaboration with Jennifer Foerster and U.S. Poet Laureate Joy Harjo.

Following the March 18 reading, Whichard Visiting Distinguished Professor in the Humanities Dr. Squint will facilitate a Q&A with the audience.

The event is being sponsored by the Thomas Harriot College of Arts and Sciences Whichard Professorship in the Humanities, the Department of English, and the Gender Studies Program.
Graduation!

Margaret Rogers (left) was named the department’s Outstanding Undergraduate for fall 2020.

While the December ceremonies were forced online by COVID-19, the pride we feel for her and all our graduates was not diminished.

Encouragement from members of the faculty and words of wisdom from Ms. Rogers can be found online at English.ecu.edu. Go English!

Morgan Banville Publishes Pilot Study, Co-edits Professional Journal

Morgan Banville’s pilot study has been published in the Association for Computing Machinery’s Special Interest Group on Design of Communication (SIGDOC) 2020 conference proceedings. Her work explores how undergraduate students interpret wearable device privacy policies.

She also co-edited the Autumn 2020 issue of The Peer Review journal. In the “letters to the editor,” she and her co-editors – all PhD students – traced out the unique opportunity that allowed them to edit a special issue, an opportunity usually afforded only to established scholars.

Temptaous Mckoy Receives Prestigious Dissertation Awards

Temptaous Mckoy (PhD ’19), assistant professor at Bowie State University, has been selected as a recipient of the 2020 Presidents Dissertation Award from the Coalition of Feminist Scholars in the History of Rhetoric and Composition.

This is the second national award Dr. Mckoy (right) has received for dissertation, which received the 2020 Conference on College Composition and Communication Outstanding Dissertation in Technical Communication Award.

Dr. Mckoy’s dissertation is titled Y’all Call It Technical and Professional Communication, We Call It #Fortheculture: The Use Of Amplification Rhetorics In Black Communities and Their Implications For Technical and Professional Communication Studies.
Transition

Cecilia Shelton (PhD ’19) has joined the faculty of the University of Maryland, College Park, as a tenure-track Assistant Professor of English.

Awards

Thekra Hindi, an English minor, was awarded the University Book Exchange Scholarship in English.

Jayde Rice (MA ’19) received the 2019-20 Bertie E. Fearing Award for Excellence in Teaching: Graduate Teaching Assistants. He is currently a student in the department’s PhD program in Rhetoric, Writing, and Professional Communication.

Mariot Valcin, Jr. won the Graduate School’s People’s Choice Award for his Three-Minute Thesis competition presentation “Ambiguity of Inter and Intra Hostility.” He is an MA student with a concentration in Multicultural-Transnational Literatures and is being mentored by Seodial Deena.

Publications

Brandon Frisby’s (BA ’07, MA ’12) inaugural children’s book, A Gator Took My Toothbrush, has been published by Cedar Fort, Inc.

Kimberly C. Harper’s (PhD ’12) “Do White People Hate Us?” has been published by Teacher-Scholar-Activist.

Alumni Serve on TPC Task Force, Participate in Panel

Four department alumni served on the Black Technical and Professional Communication Task Force that composed the Conference on College Composition and Communication’s Black Technical and Professional Communication Position Statement with Resource Guide: Kimberly C. Harper (PhD ’12), Constance Haywood (MA ’18), Temptaous Mckoy (PhD ’19), and Cecilia D. Shelton (PhD ’19).

They also joined a coalition of other scholars who participated in “Black Technical and Professional Communication,” a virtual event sponsored by the Professional and Technical Writing Program in the Virginia Tech Department of English.

Honors

Michael Brantley’s (MA ’12) Galvanized: The Odyssey of a Reluctant Carolina Confederate was a finalist for the Sam Ragan Old North State Nonfiction Award, presented by the NC Literary and Historical Association.

Ina Cariño (BA ’16) was nominated for a Pushcart Prize.

Bridget Todd’s (BA ’07) There are No Girls on the Internet has been named one of the best podcasts of 2020 by Mashable.

Outreach

The University Writing Center’s online Community Writing Center is available to assist job seekers with crafting strong résumés and cover letters and to help students who are in the process of filling out admissions or scholarship materials. The service is free to constituents throughout eastern North Carolina and is staffed by graduate and undergraduate consultants. Nikki Caswell is the director of the University Writing Center.

In Memoriam

Sally Lawrence

died January 20 at her home in Eugene, OR. She received her Master’s in English from ECU and taught for many years in the department where she served as Assistant Editor of the North Carolina Literary Review.

McKay Sundwall, professor emeritus, died January 20 at his home in Greenville, NC. He was instrumental in creating ECU’s Great Books Program and often led discussions at Sheppard Memorial Library. In addition to his many journal articles, he was co-author of the book The Learned and the Lewed: Studies in Chaucer and Medieval Literature (Harvard UP).

According to his colleagues, he will be remembered for “his unmatched skill in leading readers through various genres of literature, in particular Shakespeare’s plays and the poetry of Virgil, Dante, Chaucer, and Milton.”
Sometimes, this seems like an embarrassment of riches; and no one could go to every event. But the pandemic is making scholarly conversations accessible to a wider range of people, including students. This is a very good thing, and I hope that accessibility will remain a priority even when we are able to return to gathering in person.

Spring 2021 will be another fully online semester; but as I write this, ECU has begun administering vaccines. In the fall, I look forward to gathering together on campus again and meeting our students in the classroom. Until then, go English!

What a Long, Strange Trip It’s Been • Cheryl Dudasik-Wiggs, Editor

The Grateful Dead had it right: The long, strange trip that was the fall semester tested our talents and patience like none before it.

The Great COVID Pivot saw our semesters divided in half with 15 weeks’ worth of information taught online in 7.5 weeks. Simultaneously, meetings went virtual; and many instructors began teaching via Canvas – a newly adopted online course management system – for the first time. And, of course, there were our civic duties to uphold. But we all kept on truckin’ together.

One of the personal benefits of imposed isolation is that I have actually gotten to know some of my colleagues better. As the editor of The Common Reader, I spend quite a bit of time gathering and organizing lists of professional successes throughout each semester.

But one particularly delightful surprise came after I sent out an email calling for “how are you keeping sane?” features. Brent Henze (left) created a PowerPoint showing how he was constructing a guitar from rough stock – no pre-made parts for him! He fashioned the templates, jigs, and fixtures before starting on prepping the individual guitar parts. Watch for his start-to-finish product featured on the department’s website later this spring.

In the meantime – and in true COVID fashion – I have a couple of song requests for him: “Don’t Stand So Close to Me” (The Police). “Fever” (Peggy Lee). Or maybe even “No Particular Place to Go” (Chuck Berry).

The Fine Print: If we missed any news-worthy events that took place before December 31, 2020, or – the horror! – made an error, please forward a gentle note to editor Cheryl Dudasik-Wiggs at dudasikwiggsc@ecu.edu. And we beg you: Despite all of the wonderful work done by our colleagues over the past year, let us never speak of 2020 again.